A grand jury in St. Louis finde that eighty per cent. of crime and pauperism come directly from the saioons. The remedy proposed is high license -$500 for wines and malt liquors and $1,000 for spiritswith the suggestion that larger sums might be re sheed by disposing of the privileges at auction, under a regulation permitting but one saloon to a block, except where first class hotels are situated, when there could be two. By this plan it is thought that the number of saloons might be reduced from eighteen hundred to six or 8 hundred, and the revenue from them greatly increased over the present figure of about $300,000. Furthermore it is nrged that the high rate would do away with the low doggeries which are the chief birthplaces of crime and that hence the measure is one of common business prudence.
